CHAPTER IV Concerning The Voice In General.--The Chest Register And The Head Register Or falsetto I cannot begin this chapter on the voice better, than by quoting the words of the illustrious Gio. Giacomo Rousseau in his noted musical dictionary: The voice is the accumulation or compound of all the sounds, which a man can utter with his vocal organs. As there are not two physiognomies alike, so there are hardly two voices resembling each other. Nature in her generosity of giving away her gifts, never puts them, save in rare exceptions, all in one person; so it seldom happens that we find one person gifted with all those harmonious conditions of vocal organs that form a perfect voice. The truth is, that we find sometimes voices which are very strong and whose sound is vigorous, bright and liquid; others are flexible and sweet;...
